N. and W. Trainmaster Perhaps Fatally Injured by Explosion.

Lynchburg, Va., February 11.—John Goodykoontz, trainmaster of the Norfolk division of the Norfolk and Western Railway, was seriously, if not fatally, injured late to-day in a peculiar manner. He was passing the entrance to the proposed epileptic colony, near the city, when a premature blast scattered an immense amount of rock and debris over the train and over Mr. Goodykoontz, who sustained a compound depressed fracture of the skull, a fractured rib, and a had cut on his head.

Several workmen employed by Contractor A. M. Valz, of Staunton, who is doing the work for the State, were slightly injured.

Goodykoontz was brought to the city by the train on which he was injured, and is at the Home and Retreat in an unconscious condition. An operation during tig night will develop the extent of his trouble.

The blast was big enough to block the main line of the Norfolk and Western, causing the traffic to be deflected around the Concord-Forest cut-off. N. and W. Trainmaster Perhaps Fa-

MISTRIAL IN GORDON CASE,

Former Bank President Rebailed for Appearance In March.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Norfolk, Va., February 11.—The jury in the case of Terry B. Gordon, president of the Traders' and Truckers' Bank, charged with making false bank returns to the State Corporation Commission, failing to agree, after an hour's deliberation this morning, was dismissed, and a mistrial ordered by the court.

The defendant was rebailed for his appearance at the March term of the court in the sum of $5,000. It was not ascertained how the jury stood in the case.

INSULT TO MEMBERS OF COTTON EXCHANGE

New York Broker Resents Question Intimating Existence of Fraud.

Lively Session of House Committee at Hearing on Anti-Option Bill.

Washington, D. C., February 11 .- I regard that question as an insult to me and to every member of the Cotton Exchange," declared Vice-President

"The spinner," replied Mr. Marsh. gets it from the merchant. The New York stock is all the cotton in the world against which contracts have been sold to buyers in New York. Every contract on the New York Cotton Exchange, he insisted, "is enforcible and legal,"

Says Bill is Futile.

Mr. Marsh characterized the Scott bill to regulate cotton exchange transactions as futile and unconstitutional.

A clash between Senator Smith, of South Carolina, and L. Mandelbaum. a member of the New York Cotton Exchange, enlivened to-day's proceedings. J. E. Latham, of Greensboro, N. C., a cotton manufacturer, who was the only witness during the forenoon session, declined to assent to Chairman Scott's suggestion that the elimination of exchanges, if they depressed prices to the producers, might also have the effect of causing a decline in the price of goods to the consumer.

Senator Smith singlit to show, that the violent fluctuations in cotton were due to manipulation; that the men on change got together and compared sheets, arbitrarily fixed prices and effected a clean-up. Mr. Mandelbaum excitedly demanded that Mr. Smith be put under oath, the same as any witness, adding that the other side could show the statements were untrue. Mr. Smith vehemently asserted hig knowledge of such manipulation and, by analogy, referred to the government's alogy, referred to the government's abolishing the Louisiana lottery. Chairman Scott poured oil on the troubled waters by explaining that a member of the Senate or House is always under oath, and that if the statements were challenged the other side would have opportunity to reply.

Mr. Latham endeavored to explain that the gains in Wall Street were really not at somebody else's loss, that I am not summerently posted as to horse-racing and roulette," retorted Latham sharply.

Mr. Latham said he justified the ex-changes because of the facility they offorded for hedging transactions, but austry when there has been more uneasiness regarding the price of cotton than there is now. This will continue until the world normally produces enough for its needs or the needs are brought down to the production."

Chairman Scott asked if there was much speculation in cotton on 'change or by its members by entering thot contracts for purchase or sale of cotton with the hope of profit.

"There is no member of the exchange,"was Mr. Marsh, 'sreply, "whose entire fortune is not responsible for his contracts with his fellow-members."

Ar.
